

The Memorandum Of Understanding, also referred to as the MOU is briefly summarized as;

A good will, public document designed to open a dialogue between the People of Canada and the Elected officials representing Canadians.

The MOU was drafted by Martin Broadman, James Bauder and Sandra Bauder with the supporting signatures of over 380,000 Canadians. Its sole purpose was to propose a 'come to the table' agreement between Elected Officials and a Committee of Concerned Citizens in regard to the Unlawful Vaccine Mandates.

In addition to being delivered by Registered Mail to The Governor General Of Canada, The Honorable Mary May Simon and the Head Of The Senate, The Honorable George J Furey; It was also delivered to The Canadian Human Rights Commission, headed by Chief Commissioner Mary-Claude Landry; The United Nations Human Rights Council, (UNHRC) headed by President Nazahat Shameen Khan; And the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights headed by Palias Wilson.

The objective of the Memorandum was to suggest the establishment of a Canadian Citizens Committee made of up representatives from the public who would then be able to present the concerns of Canadians with regard to the Vaccine Mandates. These would include both Federal, Provincial and Municipal Mandates. The Memorandum also address Canadian Citizens concerns over the loss of jobs, fines issued for refusing to comply with unlawful mandates and concerns over the use of vaccine passports in violation of the Privacy Act.

The MOU was an undertaking was born in a last-ditch effort to reach out and open a constructive dialog with the elected representees of Canada who had previously ignored repeated letter campaigns, protests and attempts to be heard from their concerned constituents.

The MOU is a document to open a discussion. It has no influence or power, unless the parties named in this case the Canadian People and the Government of Canada, agree to come to the table and open communication channels.

It has to be noted, this lack of two-way communication is something that the Canadian Government has shown an unwillingness to do, which poses a serious question – what do we pay our PUBLIC SERVANTS for?

The Memorandum of Understanding was officially withdrawn on Feb 8, 2022, because of external pressures after an intense Slandorous media smear campaign; directed at the group Canada Unity and the Founders and authors, Martin Broadman, James Bauder and Sandra Bauder.

Amid slanderous – false allegations that the MOU was an insurrectionist document, designed to overturn the duly elected government, the MOU was officially withdrawn February 8th, 2022, so that it would in no way directly or indirectly with the main objective of the ongoing Convoy for Freedom.

It is the position of Team Canada Unity that the MOU document was deliberately attacked by our Canadian government officials and the Canadian media with so much ferocity because it makes clear and direct mention to the host of National and International Human Right Laws that still to this very day are being violated by our own elected representatives. So instead of democratically dealing with the core Discrimination and Segregation issues listed in the MOU, Our Government choose to break even more laws by unlawfully in intentionally implementing the Emergency Measures Act – that strangely is listed on the very last page of the MOU Reference: Page 6, Schedules A-K.
